VOL. XXVI

ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 30, 1893.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

TALKING WITH THEM.

President Cleveland and Senator Voorhees Have a Conference

OVER THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

And the Senator Makes a Statement Which Foreshadows

AN EXTRA SESSION AT AN EARLY DAY.

Congressman Tracy Also Sees the President, and Feels Confident That Congress Will Meet Shortly.

Washington, June 29.—(Special)—Senator Voorhees, chairman of the senate finance committee, was closeted with the president for an hour today, and when he left the white house, declared himself in favor of an immediate session of congress.

"I am in favor of the repeal of the Sherman law," he remarked, "and I have no conditions to bring forward. I have not abandoned my belief in the use of silver as money. I was never in favor of the bullion purchase clause in the Sherman act. I consider it fraudulent and deceptive legislation which simply reduces silver to a commodity and issues shinplasters on it. That clause should be repealed at once."

This statement from Mr. Voorhees is significant. It clearly foreshadows an extra session earlier than September.

Congressman Tracy, of New York, also saw the president by appointment today. Mr. Tracy said later that he felt certain that congress would be convened by August 1st, or earlier. He is positive the Sherman act will be repealed.

Consulting with the President.

Consultations between Mr. Cleveland and members of his cabinet today caused considerable gossip. Secretary Lamont had a long talk with the president in the forenoon and during the time it lasted the president would see no callers. When Secretary Lamont retired the senators and representatives waiting to see the president were hopeful of obtaining an audience, but Secretary Herbert appeared and he and Mr. Cleveland went into another long executive session. When Secretary Smith relieved Mr. Herbert there was a retreat on the part of those outside the president's doorway. Other members of the cabinet were also closeted with Mr. Cleveland during the day.

The report spread that Mr. Cleveland was consulting with reference to the advisability of calling an extra session of congress earlier than September, but whether this was the case is not certain. There is reason to believe that Mr. Cleveland intends to leave the city within a few days for a long stay at Buzzard's Bay, and that he and his cabinet were merely arranging matters so that he could leave.

A congressman is authority for the statement that Mr. Cleveland told him that he would not take up appointments while the financial question is at such a critical point, but would continue to issue commissions to candidates whose appointments had been decided on.

An Important Pension Ruling.

Assistant Secretary Reynolds, of the interior department has made a pension decision which will be welcome news to a large number of women who ministered to wounded soldiers in hospitals during the late war. They are to be placed on the pension rolls. The question arose upon a communication from the commissioner of pensions as to whether those women who served in hospitals during the sick and wounded soldiers were entitled to pensions under the provisions of the act commonly known as the nurses act. Assistant Secretary Reynolds holds that these persons are entitled to pensions. The commissioner has been directed to place in the name of Army nurses upon the rolls when the furnish proof that they were employed directly by the surgeon general of the army or that the person who employed them had proper authority and this authority was recognized by the surgeon general. The beneficiaries of this decision can now expect to be sent to hospitals for the purpose of superintending the special diet kitchens of the same upon the request of the surgeon general.

Will Low Wins.

The awards for the best design for the diplomas to be given to the successful exhibitor at the world's fair was today made by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis to Mr. William H. Low. The design represents the dome through the upper opening of which can be seen the eye view of the exposition grounds. On one side is Columbia, in a resting position, against a Buffalo's head and holding forth her hand to three young ones, who represent the United States and the children of the land. The expense of the trophy is blank and is intended for the name of the exhibitor to whom awarded. Below the base of the arch is a fancy barge, at the helm of which stands Columbus. The ears are flippers representing Europe, Asia, Africa and America. From the bow of the same a figure rises holding in her hand a laurel wreath.

Not Much of a Strike.

The strike at the cotton mill is over. It did not last long and didn’t amount to much while it was on. The night operatives did not work last night, but they were at work tonight as usual, at least all but ten or twelve, and these the management would like to see back. All the others are allowed to return to work exceedingly glad of the privilege. It was a difficult matter to learn who instigated the trouble, for none were willing to admit that they started the alleged strike. The places of the ten or twelve who the management would like to allow to return to work were readily filled by others who had more applications to day for work than there were places to be supplied. The reduction of 10 per cent in wages, which goes into effect July 1st, will only last until business warrants a restoration of the old rates.

The mill has an abundance of work to do and orders are coming in rapidly, but prices for the output are very small at present.

A Narrow Escape.

This morning as an aunt of Lieutenant Ed Artope, his baby and nurse were riding in his buggy when he had a narrow escape from death. An electric car of the Bellevue line ran into the horse and carriage near Highland Heights. The horse was knocked down and dragged a considerable distance and was badly hurt on the leg. The nurse and baby were thrown out of the buggy. The baby escaped injury, but the nurse was badly bruised. Mr. Artope is still in the hospital.

A New Trainmaster.

Mr. C. C. Palmer has been appointed trainmaster of the Southwestern division of the Central railroad, with headquarters at Macon, vice S. H. Hill, deceased. The Bruner with his new position.

Funeral of Mr. Boardman.

The funeral services of Mr. J. M. Boardman were held this afternoon from Christ’s Episcopal church and were largely attended, thus showing the high esteem and respect with which he was held by all classes. The services were very impressively conducted by Rev. F. E. Conyers.

The elegant casket containing the remains was covered with choice and beautiful flowers, offerings of friendship and love. A long line of carriages followed the remains to the grave, and the entire town was in哀愁. All that was once mortal of one of Macon’s leading and highly esteemed citizens.

The pallbearers were J. S. Baxter, Arthur Ayres, Henry T. Johnson, J. P. L. Jones, Dr. O. Conner, George H. Newell and George H. Plant. It will be noticeable that the majority of the pall-bearers were sons of gentlemen who were formerly close friends and associates of the deceased.

Rome, Ga., June 29.—(Special)—All Rome is talking about the levee. The question was spring because of the introduction in council of an ordinance placing the grade of the side of the levee at 100 feet above sea level. Last two or three years many handsome buildings have been put up on Broad street, and all of them are raised high above the ground.

This has caused Broad street to be lumped up in places and walking down the street red eye of either the Alps, hence every body who walks on it is liable to fall.

Closing Exercises of a Most Successful Year at This Popular Institution.

The bridal party came to Macon in a special coach this afternoon and tonight a brilliant entertainment was given at the residence of the groom’s father.

English Mother Tina Receiver.

Mr. W. Hendrick is the popular, and very efficient engineer of the city of Macon, a position which he has held several years with much credit to himself and great benefit to the community.

Judge Emory Speer, of the United States court, offered to apprise Mr. Hendrick co-recipient of the E. and Albany railroad, United States Marshal Frank Leverett is present to attest to his worthiness. Judge Speer at Savannah said it would be impossible for him to accept the recuperative without confounding or interfering with his duties as engineer of Macon. Mr. Hendrick has a great deal of work on hand and he expects soon to be deep in the labors of construction by reason of the constructing of a system of canals in Macon and he thought that his first duty would be to leave before Judge Speer on August 30th.

Why Was He Discharged?

Rome, Ga., June 29.—(Special)—George Smith, of Floyd county, is a strange boy, and is “death on snakes”—but in a different sense from that which the phrase implies. Snakes that happen to bite George die—and die quick.

He was bathing last Sunday when he felt something around his leg, and like the bad little boy in the story, found it was a snake. To follow out his impression the snake bit him and drew blood. He thought it was a snake and when he caught hold of it he struck. It was a large water moccasin, according to his statement, which is known to be a most venomous reptile. Then followed a queer state of affairs, of the kind that seems always to occur in fact to bad little boys who go in washing on Sunday. The snake dropped dead, and Smith has not been affected by the bite. And now a still stranger fact. Last summer the same boy was struck by a rattlesnake. His death was of course expected, but it didn’t come. He never even showed a symptom of being poisoned. It is not recorded that the rattlesnake died, but it is supposed that it did.

Congers, Ga., June 29.—(Special)—Mr. John C. Rosser’s dwelling was burned down last night. It was a new house and not quite finished. Supposed to have been set fire to by some person who was trying to get rid of it.

ATLANTA, GA., June 30, 1893.

Atlanta's Good Fortune.

The general depression which is so severely felt in some sections and localities has barely touched the south, and Atlanta has not suffered at all.

In a sympathetic way our city naturally feels the financial misfortunes of other money and trade centers, but the only result is to make her business men more conservative and cautious in their dealings. The suspension of the Gate City National bank at one time menaced our commercial interests, but the few weeks of waiting were easily tide over, and yesterday the depositors were paid in full, the total amount to be paid out reaching the sum of $350,000.

The failures of banks and mercantile houses in the north and west have caused an uneasy feeling throughout the country, and the volume of business has necessarily been contracted, but the south has been exceptionally free from such disasters. Here in Atlanta we have had no more failures than during the corresponding season of last year, and our banks were never on a more solid footing than at the present time. Not only is this true of Atlanta, but it is also true of the towns and the territory tributary to this city. Our correspondents and the commercial travelers who have studied the situation in the districts around Atlanta, all unite in saying that there is no complaint of actual hard times. There is the usual talk about the old oppressive financial and tariff conditions, and there is an impatient desire to see congress meet and proceed to carry out the pledges of the democratic platform, but there is no such panicky feeling as is reported in the north and west.

Our well-informed financiers and merchants all agree that hard economy and diversified crops during the past two or three years have pulled the south out of her difficulties, and in the present monetary flurry she simply looks serenely with the consciousness that beyond retarding her progress it cannot injure her.

The stranger from a locality where the people are talking about hard times will feel refreshed after visiting Atlanta. He will see fine business houses and dwellings going up on every hand, and this activity extends from the center to the suburbs. Our manufacturing industries are in full blast and a movement is on foot to increase their number. Trade is brisk enough for the season, and the banks have a sufficient supply of money for legitimate business needs. Real estate owners have their old-time confidence in Atlanta dirt, and a cheerful, confident feeling pervades all classes.

Before many weeks there will be an extra session of congress, and when the currency and tariff policy of the administration is announced there will be a general improvement in the business situation all over the country. So far as Atlanta is concerned, it is safe to say that times will be no harder than they have been, and our people are justified in looking on the bright side. The Gate City is as solid as the Piedmont escarpment on which she stands.

A Few Small Matters.

The average southern farmer makes the mistake of devoting himself to a few important matters to the neglect of the small industries that would yield him a cash income.

In the north farmers make a good living out of their mint beds and hop fields. In the south we can grow mint and hops, lavender, horsemint, smart weed, almonds, castor beans, aloes, sage, pennyroyal, stillingia, sassafras, sumach, vanilla, kola nut, ginseng, gentian, lobelia, mullein, sweetgum, datura, and many other things that have their place in commerce. There is money even in so small a thing as wild cherry bark, and excelsior and pine straw bagging are profitable. Then, the chicken industry pays well everywhere.

We have only hinted at a few products that might be looked after and handled by the children of our farmers. While the grown people are attending to their work on the farm the young ones should not be idle. There are many ways in which their little hands can earn money without hard work. The drug stores and seed stores of the country are filled with herbs and seeds that come from northern farms and gardens, but our southern farmers have never engaged in this line of business. They have considered it a small matter.

If we propose to make this region self-supporting and keep our money at home, drawing all the outside cash we can, it will be necessary to devote more attention to the small things of life.

If a man can make a fortune out of a mint garden in New York he can do it here. If people in other sections can make money out of herbs and seeds there is a field for such industries in the south. There are money-making opportunities all around us.

A Stalwart Reformer.

The New York Sun has a correspondent who thinks that the remedy for the present depression is to go to war with some strong nation. It would improve business, stimulate our great industries, and increase the wages of artisans and the demand for labor.

The frank reformer goes on to say:

A great nation, one of our people will say that the time just after our civil war was the most prosperous period our country has ever known, and they think another great war would be followed by a similar increase of wealth and prosperity. They say the war was fought on a better basis than now, and they are not at all repelled by the idea of a great national debt. They say a great national loan would obtain for our present use the same amount that the future development of the country would easily pay, and they think that would be a good arrangement.

Many others say that war is the only thing that will bring back the confidence which threatens to move and more seriously. I think they exaggerate the extent and force of this disturbing influence, or at any rate the stage of development it has reached. In view of existing conditions, and as patriotic they would be glad to see the beginning of a great war. Merchants and manufacturers say that as things are now business is war, all the fiercer it would be for our government to fight some other nation than to maintain a peace struggle of competition against each other.

The strongest factor in the longing for a great war is the desire to have a new opportunity for individual success. The majority of our people, more and more narrowly limited, and that while nobody seems to be able to compete with them, are in peace, a great war would likely bring in new conditions and make many desirable readjustments in our national affairs.

It is argued that a great war would expand our industries and open new avenues to wealth and success for millions who now have no prospect but lifelong toll at insufficient wages. All over the country, in widely separated communities, thousands of intelligent men who have never communicated with each other, have this desire for a foreign war. They have no enemy against whom to rally, but they believe that a conflict would end the restlessness and discontent of the masses, and that men would have a better chance to capture some of the prizes of life than they now have under peaceful conditions.

It is needless to say that The Sun's correspondent only lacks the provocation to become a very dangerous citizen. It is not consistent with our ideas of Christian citizenship and government to go to war except in self-defense. Nor is it likely that such a course would benefit us in the long run. For a time it would give us a booming prosperity, but in the end the loss of life, the demoralization, the increased taxes and pensions and other evils would heavily burden the people. We are still feeling the effects of a civil war that ended twenty-eight years ago. If this reformed must fight, let him go into the fields and fight the grass and the weeds and the forces of nature that interfere with man's progress. Or let him fight extravagance, dishonesty, intemperance and crime. A man can do plenty of fighting without going out to slaughter the people of another nation.

Prosperous Truck Farmers.
 Our readers who have given some attention to truck farming in Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas will be interested in a few facts and figures about this industry around Norfolk, Va.

Mr. W. F. Wise has an article in The Southern States for June in which the statement is made that one thousand farms within a radius of twenty miles from Norfolk ship every spring $5,000,000 worth of early fruits, vegetables and berries to the northern cities. The business has grown up since the war. In 1879 the value of the crops produced was $1,751,645, and eight years later it amounted to $2,287,042, exceeding in value the entire iron product of Virginia for that year. In 1890 the truckers realized $4,541,077, and their industry has increased since that date.

Mr. Wise writes:

A Texas Editor writes: "Robert Louis Stevenson says he writes his stories over many months before publishing them. If Robert Louis Stevenson writes his stories over many months, then all the world would be the loser. Story writing and poetry, when the manager becomes to all intents and purposes an equal partner in the enterprise, continuing upon this basis until he buys a farm and starts business on his own account. Quite a number of young men today have bought farms and are doing well. The manager, in my words, from $25,000 to $50,000. . . . The wages of the common laborer are from 75 cents to $1 per day; as a rule a white man who is not worth $12,500 a year can't support his wife and his children, much less himself. When you get to this point a good man should provide $40 per month the second year, in addition to house and fuel, and $50 the third year, after which he shares the profits. A section seat net from $2,000 to $4,000 per season, according to the soil, location and management."

ELECTION COMMENT.

A writer in Harper's says the express of Austria smokes fifty cigarettes a day and several strong cigars at night. Before becoming too familiar with us the express will please have her teeth caulked and her breath disinfected.

The agricultural department, according to a Texas editor, which has published two or three syndicates which have been having a great deal of trouble with the press, and which reaches nearly the whole of the country, is the "Gulf-Edged Butter Compound," an article which is being extensively advertised and sold to farmers with the assurance that by its help they can make more butter than ever before. The orient will continue to demand and to utilize vast quantities of silver for use in candle, in exchange and for the ornamental and decorative arts.

Cincinnati Commercial Gazette: The commercial world cannot, in our opinion, bring matters down to the single gold standard. There is enough of the world's gold to satisfy the United States, therefore, in connection with the United States meet the question. To this point we are coming, and, although the United States is a great silver country, there is no reason why we should not be prepared to meet the issue that way.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean: Unless some great nation stands like a rock against a continental England will triumph and gold will be the universal standard of monetary measurement, and silver will be relegated to the category of base metals and a mere commodity.

A German immigrant who started without a dollar, has made $500,000 since the war by truck farming. One farm of one hundred acres has netted $4,200 a year since 1887. The larger truckers live in fine houses and have telephone connection with their farms and also with the telegraph office. When the rush of the shipping season is over they go off to the summer resorts or to Europe.

Before the truck farming era these same farms yielded scarcely any profit to their owners. Now they are better than a gold mine.

ELECTION THIS FALL.

Fall elections this year will not be especially significant, but their outcome will be watched with interest.

There will be eight state elections and governors will be elected in four states, Virginia, Massachusetts, Iowa and Ohio.

In Virginia a democratic governor will, of course, be elected. Massachusetts and Iowa cannot hope to elect democratic governors unless Russell and Bates are in the race. The personal popularity of these two men has overcome political apathy in the past, but their states are all the same practically republican.

The struggle in Ohio will be one of great interest. There, the issue will be sharply defined between tariff reform and protection-between free silver and the gold standards. The state is doubtful. Last November it went for Harrison by a plurality of 1,072. The republicans carried the state offices and the legislature by small majorities, and lost the congressional delegation by eleven to ten.

The democrats apparently stand a good chance of winning Ohio. McKinley has lost some of his popularity, and the workingmen are dissatisfied with the tariff and financial policy advocated by him. A democratic victory would be encouraging, but under all the circumstances a republican triumph by a close vote would not mean anything.

Upon the whole, the coming elections do not promise much excitement.

An Outside Suggestion.

It is understood that the bankers in Mexico believe that the silver situation affords the United States an opportunity to force bimetallism upon Europe.

The idea is that our government should issue a gold loan of $500,000,000 4 1/2 per cent bonds and they would be immediately taken up in Europe where other government securities would not be able to compete with them. Then, gold would flow into the United States, and in a short time Europe, in self-defense, would have to adopt bimetallism, and the silver held by our treasury would rise in value.

The Mexican bankers think that we can control the whole business, and they predict that if nothing is done to bring about bimetallism all the silver-producing countries will begin manufacturing for themselves, and Europe and the United States will lose their trade.

It is interesting to compare these views of the bankers of a free-silver country with those expressed by the bankers of the gold standard countries. But it is not likely that our government would issue $500,000,000 in bonds in order to draw gold from Europe. That would create a new national debt and would perpetuate the national banking system. It is not a part of our financial policy to attempt such startling feats. As the chief silver producing country of the world it will be safe for us to declare in favor of bimetallism, with the confident assurance that their interests will sooner or later induce the nations of Europe to follow our example.

The conditions now operating against silver are so purely artificial that no heraldic remedy is required. They are only temporary and cannot be maintained.

The Farmers and the Future.

There are good times in store for the farmers of Georgia who are doing the hardest work of their lives-living at home, and building up home interests.

The news reaches us from nearly every county in the state of abundant crops which, with good seasons, will top the barns with home supplies and make the farmers independent of the foreign markets. More attention is being given to stock raising; the grain acreage promises richer results; farmers generally have cut down expenses, and are buying little on credit; and so, there is no reason why next fall and winter should not find them in a prosperous condition.

Extracts reproduced at various times in The Constitution from the weekly newspapers indicate that the tendency is to make the farms not only self-supporting, but sources of outside supply. This seems to be the idea of the farmers this year, and they are working with a greater will than ever.

Good times are coming to the country; and they are not far off; the success of the tillers of the soil means the welfare of the people at large, and when they are on top there will come a prosperity which all will share.

They are working on right lines now; in the face of adverse circumstances they have been cheerful and confident; it is but right their toil should be rewarded; and it will be, in the most ample measure.

THE SITUATION.

New York Commercial Advertiser: If the democratic congress has the power to help the country and improve the business outlook, let it get to work at once. Not a hour should be wasted.

New York Tribune: If Mr. Cleveland wishes to make use of a grand occasion to be convened before August ends on the heels of July. Weather is nothing; holidays are nothing; business, business, business is everything.

Washington Post: In pardoning the three marchers, Fielden, Neube and Schwab, Governor Altgeld has done a tremendous mistake, far-reaching in its consequences and unsettling as to much that was gained by the prompt assertion of justice and good government after the memorable outbreak of anarchy in Chicago seven years ago.

Washington Post: It is to be hoped that anarchists rejoice over Governor Altgeld's pardon. It was a distinct note in favor of lawlessness.

GEORGIA POLITICAL NOTES.
 The Dawson News has this of second district politics:

"The papers are already figuring upon the second district congressional election. Mr. Ben Russell should not be left out of their calculations."

New York Tribune: This is the view. The Brunswick Times takes of it: "Lester and Turner in the same campaign will not make a winning ticket. South Georgia does not get a seat in Congress, and the South's senatorial election is to be decided by the election of a member of the Democratic party."

THE NEW YORK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The early decline in the stock market was not reflected by the greater depression owing chiefly to the appearance of new issues, but rather to the difficulty experienced by bondholders in securing a new issue of bonds. It was not a question of rates, but rather one of obtaining funds on any terms. Call loans were made as high as 8 per cent, but the demand for funds was so great that rates had to be reduced to about 7 1/2 per cent.

Call loans were bid up to about 7 1/2 per cent, and even then round amounts were obtainable. It was not until certain of the banks began to take in millions of floating house loans certificates that the acute stringency showed signs of relaxing. Adding to the more moderate rates of interest was the increase in silver which has been steadily declining at a slight improvement from the time it reached its peak during the day, the only feature being that the market had steadied in the face of weak advances from Europe and the south.

Riordan & Co.'s Cotton Circular.

By Private Wire to W. H. Martin, Manager.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Liverpool made another break today, but our market responded with a 10-point decline, but the demand to cover shorts kept prices advanced firmly throughout the day, and the difficulty experienced by bondholders in securing a new issue of bonds was very apparent. The traders on both sides was very apparent. August opened at 7 1/2 and towards the close touched 7 1/2, but the bulk of the day's work was done on the 1st and 2nd of the month. The initial pinch and the collapse of silver have introduced a strange and powerful element into the chances of the crop. The market is now in a state of uncertainty, and seems to be kept close to the shore. The future of trade just now is exceedingly uncertain, and perhaps the best course is to hold on to the market.

A HAPPY DAY IT WAS.

Nearly $200,000 Paid Out to Gate City
National Depositors.

THE ATLANTA NATIONAL DID IT ALL.

Some of the Interesting Scenes Around the Windows of the Bank—All Classes
Clamored for Their Money.

One hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars went out to the depositors in the old Gate City National bank yesterday over the counters of the Atlanta National.

This is about three-fourths of the total amount to be paid out to former depositors. It was a big day's work, but the men at the Atlanta National were fully capable of it.

Never was there such system and such regularity of work as is to be found among the men at the Atlanta National. They all know their places and always in them when they ought to be there and when there they know how to turn out work as well as the next one.

Vice President Romare, of the Atlanta National, is to be congratulated upon the successful and easy manipulation of the heavy payments of the depositors of the old Gate City National. The business was excellently managed.

Bright and early yesterday morning the depositors of the Gate City National, according to arrangements made and announced by President L. J. Hill the day before, were ready to be met at the window of the paying teller of the Atlanta National. Every dollar that had been placed on deposit at the bank was ready to be paid back to the men who had put it there.

After the invitation to them to come and go their long-lost money, came the reason and said that there was no chance of having a lonesome day at the pay window, and there was not.

When Paying Teller Kennedy stepped lightly into his apartments at the bank and drew the little bronze window up at 9 o'clock and faced the group of hungry-looking depositors in front of the window he did not even shudder at the prospect of a heavy day's work, but he met them with his handsomest and happiest smile.

Courteous and obliging ever he went about the day's business with easy grace, and jolly good humor.

There they were before him by the dozen.

There was the old depositor, who for years had done business with the broken down old Gate City National. There was the widow, poor old woman, who had placed her all in the bank, perchance just a few days before the conference, dictated that befall her son, who has suffered from the want of that money ever since. There was the young man just getting a start in the world who had placed his modest earnings there for safe keeping.

There was the rich, the poor, the young and old—all with many a sigh of relief in the realization that here at last they had come to draw out what they had feared was lost forever.

Such was the contemplation that confronted Paying Teller Kennedy as he slid up the pasteboard bearing the words, "Bank open" early in the morning.

The first checks began to fly in through the window to the courteous and genial teller. As fast as he could possibly count out money to them the Gate City National's depositors folded up their money and left the bank. It was a crowd in the hall from early in the morning until the hour of 2 o'clock arrived and the window danced back to its place.

All of the checks had to be O. K'd by the officers in charge of the Gate City National's affairs, for the payments were all made by the same old corporation through the Atlanta National.

It is already very well understood how the old Gate City National came to be able at last to pay off depositors in the bank. The money came for the building which was sold several months ago and which was bought by the Venable Brothers, of this city. The Venable Brothers were late, however, by an arrangement with the Travelers Insurance Company to pay the $100,000 for the building and this placed the Gate City National on its feet so far as the payment of the depositors was concerned.

All in all the bank had about $350,000 to pay the depositors, and the ones with some strength the Atlanta National until the money is all paid out to them.

The total amount paid out yesterday in this way, $160,000, is about three-fourths of the entire sum to be handled by the Atlanta National.

Some of the Checks.

It was a study to watch the depositors as they came into the bank yesterday for their money.

The largest check that was drawn was for $25,000. This was placed to the credit of the parties.

The largest amount actually paid out by Paying Teller Kennedy was $2,900, which went direct to the depositor in his hands and he counted the money over and rolled it under his vest as he walked out of the bank.

The smallest check was for 55 cents.

The young man who drew this smiled as he walked out of the bank, turning to watch the other men who were sitting around the corners of the bank.

Thus from 55 cents to $25,000 the money went out to the hungry depositors.

Scenes Around the Window.

There were some thrilling scenes enacted around the windows. The anxiety and relief that marked the faces of the Gate City National's depositors as they came in and walked up to where Teller Kennedy remained.

One of the most anxious of all the depositors was an old man on crutches. He was evidently a poor man, and it was plain to see that the money he had locked up in the bank months ago was all that he had at the time and consequently was money that he had needed very much since.

He came into the bank about 10 o'clock. No one knew where he had come from and so busy were the crowds getting their own money that none of them stopped to notice the old fellow.

He was accompanied by an elderly looking woman evidently his wife. They took seats along the walls of the bank in some chairs that had been placed there for the comfort of the customers. There they sat through the whole day's business.

They did not speak to any one. They were evidently too tired to say anything and came from a long way out in the country and were worn out with the tramp of the journey. When the bank was about to close, and all the customers and depositors were departing the couple arose and walked up to the window and presented their checks to the teller. The old man, with his crutches folded the crisp bill between his fingers and put them away as though they had been a cool million. Then murmuring his thanks to the man at the window he took his departure. It was a scene that was touching in the extreme sense.

The money was all handed easily by the Atlanta National. Many of the depositors deposited their money with the Atlanta National and will let it rest in the same old vault.

TOM WATSON'S APPOINTMENTS.

The Third Party Leader Announces That He Is Ready to Open Fight in Georgia.

It seems like old campaign items to be reading in the newspapers about the movements of Tom Watson, the third party leader in Georgia.

A few months ago The Constitution warned the people of Georgia that Watson was not honest and that his announcement of his appointments to speak made by Watson formally over his own name in the Lincoln Home Journal, a people's party paper, showed that The Constitution was right: Douglasville, July 4th.

Mr. Watson defines the purpose of his campaign as follows:

"Note that the above named places I hope to meet those who are interested from the standpoint of patriotism, in the great cause of the Union."

"The discussion will be confined almost exclusively to questions of finance, transportation and taxation. Partisan politics, save from time to time, will receive no attention at all. My purpose is to have a cause, dispassionate examination of our present methods of legislation and administration as compared with the past, and to present a broad and comprehensive view of the constitution itself."

"It will be my aim to treat these questions as far as the present will have cause to say so that no definite present will be caused to any one's feelings or his convictions are trodden with disrespect."

"Where we must continue to differ it is my wish that we may do so in mutual good will and in the forbearance of each other."

"I will do all possible to make up for the incidents and all excessive display of partisan spirit."

IN SECURING JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES,

Who Will Speak Here on the Fourth—The Movement One Promising Every Success.

After a most earnest request John Temple Graves has consented to deliver the "Reign of the Demagogue," with which he has met with such success throughout the country, next Tuesday afternoon at the Atlanta Chautauqua. This was the time originally allotted to Secretary Atoka Smith, who has since found that he would be unable to be present. Mr. Graves will, therefore, be the orator of the day.

Although there were only two speeches made yesterday the entire day was consumed by the trial, the Judge's charge being exceedingly short.

The jury retired at 2:30 o'clock, and after remaining an hour were recalled by the Judge on the statement that they were not likely to agree. One of the jurors asked to be recharged in regard to the testimony of Buck O'Shields.

About half-past 5 o'clock a mistrial was declared and the whole matter will have to be gone over again. The statement made by Roberts to the jury, in which he covered the entire ground presented by the state, had a perceptible effect on the jurors, to the extent that six of them were willing to accept his word instead of the state's witnesses. Roberts' case will hardly be called again before the next term of court.

Han Brotherton's Case.

The case of Han Brotherton, who was indicted for assault with intent to murder and for carrying concealed weapons, was called yesterday afternoon while the Roberts' jury was out.

Solicitor Hill stated that he would examine a few witnesses with the view of allowing Brotherton to plead guilty to shooting at another.

Robert L. Boggs, who was the man shot at by Brotherton at Spilman's saloon, was the first witness. He testified that young Brotherton had come into the saloon where he is barkeeper and wanted to get a drink of whisky. Boggs refused to allow him to have it, as he was a minor. This action on the part of Boggs agitated young Brotherton, who then drew a gun and fired at Boggs, the bullet cutting a lock of the bartender's hair off.

Other witnesses were introduced to testify to the same facts. Judge Clark then gave his permission that the plea of guilty of shooting at another might be entered, and Brotherton will be sentenced tomorrow morning. Han Brotherton was not in court yesterday afternoon as he was at the bedside of his father, who is quite ill.

The McAlister Case Disposed Of.

The case of the state against McAlister, charged with having been a member of the American Employers' Liability Insurance Company was taken up. The attorneys for McAlister were Messrs. Glenn & Maddox and after a consultation they decided that to take a verdict of not guilty would be satisfactory to their client. The verdict is, in the main, in accordance with the opinion of the unfortunate man. He conferred with Judge Hillyer, attorney for the insurance company, and he stated that the company did not care to push the matter.

A jury was impaneled and the verdict of not guilty returned as a matter of form.

Except to the Report.

Captain Harry Jackson filed exceptions yesterday morning to the report of Special Master Moyers. Moyers' report finds for the Richmond & Danville receivers in the sum of $3,416.75, but of this only $100.35 is placed as superior to the bondholders.

The exceptions claim that the evidence showed that the receivers were entitled to a sum of $1,312.05 prior to the bondholders, and also to a lien of $2,028 for operating expenses.

On the charge of the receiver being liable to pay the expenses of the receivership, the auditor's report, inasmuch as it denies their lien, is set aside and as a judgment for their claims is rendered.

Before Judge Marshall Clarke.

The case of George Cooper, a grocer that failed some time ago, was taken up before Judge Marshall Clarke on a writ of certiorari. After Cooper failed, and before a receiver was appointed, Cooper was arrested on the charge of defrauding his creditors. He was arrested and about $400 taken from him by the police. Cooper's creditors took steps to prevent the chief of police from turning the money over to Cooper. Cooper took out a bail trover action.

Judge Clarke will render a decision this morning.

Better Make Your Returns.

Tomorrow is the last day to make the returns for Fulton county, and all those who fail to come to tax day will be charged double. Receiver Aristedde declares that he has issued his last and final warning.
